

Opposites Attract

Even if you and your groom have a lot of things in common, interior design style may not be one of them. It's all about compromise and finding one-of-a-kind pieces to fill your home together. To help you reach that middle ground, we asked three of Charlotte's finest designers to choose a piece that blends two styles. Whether it's Shabby Chic and Swedish, Vintage and Contemporary, or Tuscan and Rustic, these designs are sure to match both your visions of home. —Sarah Ryberg

If you're Vintage and he's Contemporary...

The piece: Antique buffet in a contemporary dining room

"[Pictured is] a client's dining room. They are a young couple who wanted an updated yet sophisticated look for their home. The wife already owned the antique buffet seen here and wanted to use it in their dining room for storage and serving. It was just a bit too large for the inset space, so we had it resized and it now fits perfectly. This traditional piece complements the architecture and balances the more contemporary feel of the other pieces in the room."
